

SUMMARY

Each of these standards features requirements based on several years of independent laboratory testing products from the marketplace; determining where the dividing lines lay between products that protect and those which do not. The standards do not seek to replace conventional wisdom with new concepts of academic origin, but are founded on a level of best practice established over several decades by leading garment manufacturers. The result is a series of documents that - even taking into account concerns in respect of the back protectors standard - will provide exceptional benefits to motorcyclists seeking dedicated safety clothing and those who wish to make their purchase against a recognisable, independent mark of fitness for purpose.

Note The European Standards for motorcyclists' jackets, trousers and suits has been undergoing revision as prEN 17092. Please contact PVA-PPE Group for the latest information on the development of these documents.
